THE NRA USES DECEPTIVE CLAIMS TO ATTACK BARACK OBAMA

During Barack's career in the Illinois and United States senates, he proudly stood to defend the rights of hunters and sportsmen while doing everything he could to protect children — including his own two daughters — from illegal gun violence.

But the NRA-ILA is distributing a dishonest and cowardly flyer that makes confrontational accusations and runs away from verifying them, pushing deceptive claims without the facts to back them up. Readers have to look on a web page to find the supposed facts behind these disgraceful attacks, but the "proof" falls very short.

The non-partisan Factcheck.org has even demonstrated how shameful the NRA's deception is:

The NRA, however, simply dismisses Obama's stated position as "rhetoric" and substitutes its own interpretation of his record as a secret "plan." Said an NRA spokesman: "We believe our facts."... [T]he NRA has cherry-picked, twisted and misrepresented Obama's record to come up with a bogus "plan."

Barack has clearly spelled out his position on guns to Field & Stream:

"I am very mindful of the fact that sportsmen in America may have gone hunting with their fathers, their grandfathers, their mothers, their grandmothers, and that this is part of a tradition and a way of life that has to be preserved. And there's nothing that I will do as president of the United States that will in any way encroach on the ability of sportsmen to continue that tradition."
