THE TRUTH ABOUT BARACK'S VISITS TO OVERSEAS TROOPS

From right-wing bloggers and email smears all the way up to John McCain, false claims and rumors have been spreading that Barack snubbed American soldiers on his foreign trip.

We expect these lazy, easily dismissed attacks from the shadowy nutcases who produce email smears, but John McCain should know better. These claims are particularly hypocritical coming from him.

The truth is, Barack Obama learned to love this country from his grandfather from Kansas, a World War II veteran who taught him the Pledge of Allegiance. He was proud to thank our troops for their service and dedication when he visited them in Kuwait, Afghanistan, and a combat support hospital in Iraq (without cameras or fanfare).

Calls these lies for what they are — false, hypocritical attacks on a man honoring his country and those who serve it.
